

Article Prices

For anyone who has an interest in finding content for their web-sites, the question of reasonable asking prices for article writing is bound to have come up. Some people charge ridiculously cheap rates, but then, of course, produce articles which are just as ridiculous to try and decipher. Others charge huge amounts of money for work which most intelligent people would look at with a critical eye and decide that they could write something which was almost as good for free! This wouldn't be practical in most cases, but the thought is there. So what is one to do? It seems that the most sensible thing to do is to find a writer with reasonable rates, not ridiculously cheap or overly expensive. Find a writer who is willing to give you a sample of their writing, so that you can decide whether they are able to provide what it is that you are after. Once you find someone you are happy with, you can relax and get on with other things, knowing you have found someone who can produce quality work for you, saving you time, which is, after all, money&hellip;..